Prize for Poetry in 1934

Robert Hillyer

Pattern of a Day

In none of Mr. Hillyer's books have there been such appeals of emotional and spiritual experience as in this. Remaining for the most part to the lyrical mood, the poems present never-the-less an extreme variety of thought, ranging from gaiety through some tender moments and inspired sentiments to the dark point of the soul. A few of them, however, are above pure music and a lower character reveals itself in subtle ways, while others - as it is impossible to this detail up - alternate between the artistic and the grim.
Included also is a prose and philosophical sonnet sequence "In Time of Man" which Mr. Hillyer delivered at the College of William and Mary for the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Phi Beta Kappa.
In the mastery of its technique and the variety of its subject matter, this new book will perhaps be the most rewarding of all Mr. Hillyer's volumes.
