New York,
 Feb. 17.

Dear Viola:

Here I am! I just had your letters forwarded from the west.
 We are in a terrible confusion of packing & unpacking & re-packing - so I fear I can not come out to you. Could you come in to lunch or dinner here one day - we are you & Violet?

free Monday lunch or Tuesday dinner. Do make it if you can, for we are probably sailing again in about ten days. Our telephone is: Stuyvesant 4674 - Ext. 18. - whatever that means. I have just copied it off. But it is safer to drop us a card, as we are in & out & I do not want to miss you. Come if you can. I wish I could run out & embrace the lot of you, but as I can not even get to my perfectly good relatives in Oranges. you will forgive me this time. I may be back again in the autumn, but everything is just lapping now.

It was even so good & you in inquired about places to stay.
I came here on the recommendation of some English friends, though Americans seem to consider it a little too gay. However, we are soon en route once more.

I can not write a proper, chatty letter. But do come if you can.

Love to all,

(H.M.A.)
